

end-user license agreement (eula)

1. General

This is a contract between you and bold (Markgrafentraße № 35, 78467 Konstanz, Germany). By purchasing and using any of our font-license, you expressly consent to this agreement.

This Agreement supersedes any agreement between you and bold. If you do not accept the terms, you will not be able to request or use our fonts.

Upon purchase, you accept German law and this agreement. Our software, fonts and licenses should not be shared, distributed, copied or resold.

2. Copyright

The copyright remains with the respective designer and is not transferred when purchasing a license.

3. License

The buyer receives a license but is not the owner of the font.

For the sale of licenses only we and selected resellers are entitled. The font can only be used by one person and the license can not be transferred to other people.

Basically, we offer two types of licenses: for use on your computer for printed matter and for a website. If you want to use the font for applications or e-books, then you should contact us. The license for computer and website must be purchased separately. For the computer we provide the font in the file format "opentype" (otf). For web pages you get the font in the "web open font format" (woff / woff2), which you can integrate into your website via fontface. Embedding the font software in another software or device or in another form requires you to purchase a specific license. Please contact us to discuss further details.

3.1 Desktop

Unless otherwise agreed, the purchase of a font applies to one user and can be installed on two computers. If a font is used by the buyer for a project and this project is changed by another person, then another license must be purchased. If you need a lot of licenses for a project team or a company, then you should contact us and we can discuss the details.

3.2 Website

The purchase of a license of a web font applies to a website (main URL) with limited page views. If the font is used for a second main URL then you will need another license.

4. Use

We do not allow users to make changes to our fonts. Conversion of a desktop font into a webfont as well as a webfont into a desktop font or another format is not allowed.

If you plan to customize or change fonts, you should contact us. We can make you an offer.

We try to produce our typefaces to the highest standards. In addition, we are happy to assist you in using the font properly on your desktop or website. If you have difficulties with our fonts, we will try to solve the problem. We assume no liability or damages for this transaction and for improper use. You use the fonts at your own risk.

5. Final declaration

We reserve the right to update our license agreement at any time without prior notice or notification.
