End-user license agreement

1. General

This is a contract between you and Bold (Markgrafenstr. 35, 78467 Konstanz, Deutschland). By purchasing and using any of our font-license, you expressly consent to this agreement.

This Agreement supersedes any agreement between you and Bold. If you do not accept the terms, you will not be able to request or use our fonts.

Upon purchase, you accept German law and this agreement. Our software, fonts and licenses should not be shared, distributed, copied or resold.

2. Copyright

The copyright remains with the respective designer and is not transferred when purchasing a license.

3. License

The buyer receives a license but is not the owner of the font software.

For the sale of licenses only we and selected resellers are entitled. The font can only be used by one person and the license can not be transferred to other people. We offer seven different license types. A separate license must be purchased for each area of use. Please refer to the attached “scope of use” document for the terms of use.

4. Supply

For desktop computers, we provide the font in the “OpenType” (OTF) file format. For websites, you’ll receive the font in the “Web Open Font Format” (WOFF and WOFF2), which you can integrate into your website using Fontface. To embed the font in other software, on another device, or in any other form, you must purchase a special license. Please contact us to discuss further details.

5. Use

We do not permit users to make changes to our fonts. Converting a desktop font into a web font, or converting a web font into a desktop font or another format, is not permitted.

If you plan to customize or modify fonts, please contact us. We would be happy to provide you with a quote. We strive to produce our fonts to the highest standards. In addition, we are happy to assist you with the proper use of the font on your desktop or website. Should you encounter any difficulties with our fonts, we will attempt to resolve the issue. We assume no liability or claims for damages in connection with this transaction or in the event of improper use. Use of the fonts is at your own risk.

6. Final declaration

We reserve the right to update our license agreement at any time without prior notice or notification.